

Part one

“Where am I?” Jane Goodall opened her eyes with a sort of blurry, white light shining in her eyes. About a minute later the mysterious, blurry, white light disappeared, somehow out of the odds the white blurry turned greener than ever, it took shape into a half-drawn leaf, as I looked slowly to the tip of the leaf, it could be seen, a dewdrop fell on my eye.... I came back to life. I gasped for air, it felt like the oxygen had disappeared. Finally, as the air approached my lungs I blessed the million trees that surrounded me. I thanked mother nature for taking care of me. Alongside the trees massive leaves covered the way with different species of insects and many wonderful things. Seeing the best, I could with my “once swollen eye”. After daydreaming in this lovely scene, I stood up and rustled the leaves in front of my eyes, they smoothly crossed my chin. A human like mammals back caught my eye, it was rather a magnificent scene, but as much as a good memory lasts two cold hearted men approached slowly to the mammal, without any consent or reason they captured the little being. Randomly a large bunch of bananas fell on my head I was knocked out cold: Once again out of the odds the same burry white light entered my eyes. As my eyes gradually opened the same mammals I saw earlier, which were captured had surrounded me. They gestured with a funny like sign language, it seemed like they were trying to communicate with me, I realised they have great minds. Their leader confusingly looked at me and gestured to his fellow friends to fetch something, I laid there in pain and confusion; a short time later two of the leader’s friends came with leaves covered in honey. Whilst I said a little prayer and was in awe of what they were doing I wondered what was in these wonderful being’s mind? They gently lifted me and placed my back against a tree while observing me from head to toe. My eyes try to adjust and make out who these amazing mammals are. After these “mini-Einstein’s” had picked me up and place me gently in a safe place my eyes somehow made a figure of a short human like being with soft teddy bear like fur. Two more mammals arrived with a half-broken coconut filled with fresh luscious clean water from the nearby stream. The young intelligent minds fed me the water sip after sip. I felt a slight bit of life energy enter me. After the leader ordered his fellow tribe members to do something, I couldn’t quite decipher what he was communicating but the being stood really close to me and moved me so gently to rest on the forest floor. Deep inside my heart I felt that little did they know that great rewards were coming their way. The beings wrapped a gigantic leaf around my head, I felt the pain from the bruises on my forehead. I had always thought there was a limit to intelligence or even IQ but these beings expanded their knowledge in how they worked together unlike humans and generated intelligence as a team. I was shocked and taken back how their brains worked. After wrapping the large leaf on my head, they used two of their fingers to dip in the honey and smoothly crossed my forehead to use as a glue. I also wondered if they knew the healing properties of honey itself. I was once again shocked by the gentleness and thought process of these outstanding minds. After some time, the beings left me and slept to the left and right of me. I slept in the middle of the forest while feeling warmer than a fresh blanket, it was a memorable moment in my life. But once again as much as good memories last.... When I awoke after a fresh snooze ready to stretch, but as I stretched, I realised the beings weren’t near me? I thought they had gone to their home, but at that exact moment I heard a truck engine start and I saw my friends in deep sadness. I felt great anger and cursed the human who was driving the truck. The chase was on I am going to retrieve my new found friends; my heart hurt as I saw them trapped with no hope inside a dirty, cramped metal cage.

Part two

Jane Goodall has lost her friends, who we have not discovered yet who they are? However, Jane does not step back to watch and hesitate she makes a quick direct decision, read on to find out more. With a decision chosen with no regret Jane ran straight to the mammals without a care to her own safety, she ran on the path as fast as a Lamborghini. She accelerated and jumped onto the truck with a loud BANG! The cruel men driving the truck got suspicious and checked their rear mirrors right and left. she stood in the middle holding her breath, her friends gestured in excitement and now with a clearer mind she realised who these mammals were, they are chimpanzees. The force of the truck breaks hit hard interrupting her thoughts and attempt of communicating with her new friends. With all the determination and will she smash the lock with an iron bar that was in the back of the truck, not only the lock broke, so did the cage bars. Luckily the truck stopped and Jane and her friends quickly evaluated their situation looking at the way that leads straight back to the forest. One by one they jumped exuberantly out of the truck Jane followed them quickly looking back to ensure they didn't get seen. The chimps strolled along in a line and Jane noticed there was an extra chimpanzee? It was the one from before, in the beginning who was captured by the cruel men. That's how one touch and a fallen bunch of bananas started a revolution. Jane and her new found friends looked into the distance of their forest and all smiled, a bright future was ahead, the same white blurry light approached Jane....